What's new in Beyond Mankind: The Awakening:

The Acro Storm is a series of kites designed by Dustin Bradshaw. The original design was started by Bradshaw as a small fleet of hand built kites without bridle lines with two or three kites. Within the next few years, the design became a popular foil kite and there are now a variety of different types of Acro Storms designed for different applications and varying functions. The Acro Storm was built to be lighter than most kites available, and like the Bozo, it was designed to be flown with one hand. While this design was originally created for leisure flying, it is now used in paragliding. The lines of the Acro Storm are also inherently less breakable than traditional lines. The line of the Acro Storm is different from the lines of most other kites. It is made of Spectra, which is a special nylon fiber with long string life. The Spectra is interwoven to make the line much more durable and flexible, but the design has an effect in its performance. Bradshaw said of this design "Not only is the line exceptionally durable and long lasting, but it's extremely smooth and constant." The design is also designed to align with the pull of the rider's arm, preventing a buildup of pressure on the kite lines, but the Spectra remains relatively light and easy to fly, including without the lines. Design The Acro Storm is small in size and under one foot in length, making it easy to fly with one hand. The lines are created to align with the flow of the arm in a centrifugal action. This makes it easier for the lines to follow the riders arm, ensuring that the kite does not develop high levels of gyroscopic resistance, which could compromise the flight performance. The lines of the Acro Storm are also inherently less breakable than traditional lines. This can be attributed to two factors: (a) the Acro Storm is designed as a very small kite with high loads and therefore less stress on the mounting hardware, and (b) the lines are designed to use a Spectra fabric. This helps dampen the vibration or micro-bends that may occur due to the structure of the lines. Bradshaw noted that the lines on the Acro Storm can be either relatively lower tension lines or higher tension lines. These lines can be changed within a range of tensions based on the style of flying and size of the kite.

Indie developer, UK-based, Thomas Bidaux, is offering a series of unique, stripped down, pioneering games that examine, build and introduce you to some of the most intimate and exciting aspects of video games. "Eun Ji" introduces the concept of a game in a purely metaphoric sense through an investigation of Eun Ji and the first game ever, a rock-paper-scissors paradigm. "Vicissitude" is a game, and a world you might inhabit, based on the idea of vicissitude, the act of change in a particular regard. "Uriel's Chasm" is a symbolic exploration of the destructive power of humanity's tendency to name, rank, measure and compare - competing through society's traditional means of war and strife. Uriel's Chasm is a surreal, hypnotic, exploration of oppressive systems with a rock-paper-scissors theme. Set in an extensive universe, we explore concepts and mechanisms of change in a world of "objects" that have the power to travel at faster than the speed of light. We're always on the brink of becoming something else, or destroying ourselves, but it doesn't seem to matter. What we're capable of doing matters more than anything else. When a comet, crashing into Earth, uncovers a mysterious cave hidden beneath our planet's crust and deposits a girl with extraordinary abilities into a strange and ancient world, she is the only thing standing between the eroding fabric of her world and the unknown. Uriel's Chasm is a surreal, narrative-driven exploration of oppressive systems through the lens of a rock-paper-scissors paradigm. Uriel's Chasm was launched for PC through the site Indiegogo in December 2013. Patreon exclusive: I recently got a chance to talk with Azura Skye from The Gingers about her experience working as an actress in the anime industry and why she's drawn to this relatively new form of entertainment. This is the first in a series of articles with different members of the anime industry, discussing their craft, struggles, and goals. What inspired you to pursue acting? I've been modeling and doing some acting since I was around 11 or 12. I was never a serious actor and never felt I had enough talent to be one. I just got into it because I liked modeling and being on camera.
