PROVO — A proposed plan to build a third golf course at Ridgeline, near Provo's Twin Creeks Golf Course, received additional support Tuesday. A Southern Utah Habitat for Humanity subcommittee approved a motion to support the Ridgeline Community Improvement Association's zoning request for a conditional use permit and road use variance to build a second 18-hole course at the Ridgeline golf course, at 315 Forest Heights Road. Ridgeline is owned by Provo businessman and former BYU football player Tyler Glenn, who has proposed a $43 million golf course improvement project for the 42-acre Ridgeline golf course property, including a new third 18-hole golf course. Glenn hopes to eventually operate the course, according to Ridgeline officials. It's the second time the project received support from the subcommittee, which includes the neighborhood's board of directors, school board, police and fire departments, and other interested parties. The first time around, the proposal failed to receive approval from the full Southern Utah Habitat for Humanity subcommittee, and the group approved the committee's recommendation Tuesday. One of the area's largest landowners, Glenn has proposed putting up a complex at Ridgeline that includes retail buildings, a new campus for 5-star Institute for Transformational Learning. It would replace the current golf course with a combination of commercial and residential developments. We believe world peace begins with the resolution of differences between one's self and one's neighbor. We can only make this happen if we share ideas and intentions together. So we decided to create a map of
